

T2023_08 Avoid using your work email on public facing internet websites

It is advisable to refrain from using your work email address on publicly accessible internet websites. Work emails often contain sensitive information related to your job or organization, and by using them on public websites, you may inadvertently expose this information to a broader audience. Additionally, using a personal or disposable email address for non-work-related online activities can help maintain a clear separation between your professional and personal digital identities, enhancing your online security and privacy.

References

- Klosowski, T. (2019, December 11). What not to do on your work computer. Wirecutter: Reviews for the Real World.
<https://www.nytimes.com/wirecutter/blog/what-not-to-do-on-your-work-computer/>